If we believe that time is money, then time travel is a great business resource, yes or yes?

Every successful leader—whether for profit or non-profit—understands that, for their initiatives to flourish involves craftsmanship in the art of time travel. We work to enthrall, to capture our audience’s attention. Here’s your chance to sample business fables in the Blue Two™ series: think of them as "movie trailers in print" to see if this is the next blockbuster feature for your firm. Our business fables equip your team to see around the corner and over the horizon.

The Blue Two™ saga is the never-before-told global story of the Papal Security Forces through their 2000+ years of history. Founded by Malchus, the slave who had his ear cut off by Peter in the Garden of Gesthemene, they have the depth of experience and resources that make Mission Impossible seem like your darling daughter's tea party. Malchus is transformed by Jesus' healing touch: not just in body but in his entire person. So will you be by this engaging series!

Whether we call them clients, customers, patients or readers, our end game is the same: pulling them out of the fog of modern media into the transformation from “searching” (Hebrew: dodim, לחֲשׂוֹק), to secure and self-giving (Hebrew: ahabà, אַהֲבָה). Across every race, creed and culture, effective parenting and best business practice is mentoring those in our charge through the transformation from selfish to selfless. It is a timeless truth that growing our market means serving more people.

Business fables are a special class of yarns we spin to mend the rends in our social fabric. These stories reflect back to key players of [y]our value delivery circle, the myths that keep all of us from achieving optimum outcomes.

The Blue Two™ series equips you to see over the horizon, to see around corners by raising your perspective. Join us to learn how:

- subtle shifts in vantage point can unblock what you’re looking for,
- understanding the differences between relational speech and transactional speech can accelerate your career,

- to apply the timeless truth that “heart speaks to heart before mind is open to mind.”
